South Brunswick High School art teachers Dianne Belnay, Laurie Budhu, Norman Chow, Katie McMillan, Twila O'Connell and Betty Ann Snediker have each selected six works of current art students to display in this exhibit.

The chosen works are in a variety of media, including black and white film photography and digital painting. Digital media are used for both graphic design and fine art. Several portraits are presented, ranging in style from realistic to surreal. Some of the works clearly carry a message.

Since these works are selected from class assignments, we have the special opportunity of seeing similar subjects as they are treated differently by the student artists.

The school district's annual spring art show provides an all-too-brief occasion to appreciate the talent and creativity of our students. This show gives us the opportunity to take an unhurried look at some of the best work. Enjoy.
